AVIALAE CHAPTER ONE PROOFS!

My favorite part of the printing process is proofs. It's so exciting to see your work printed and bound for the first time!

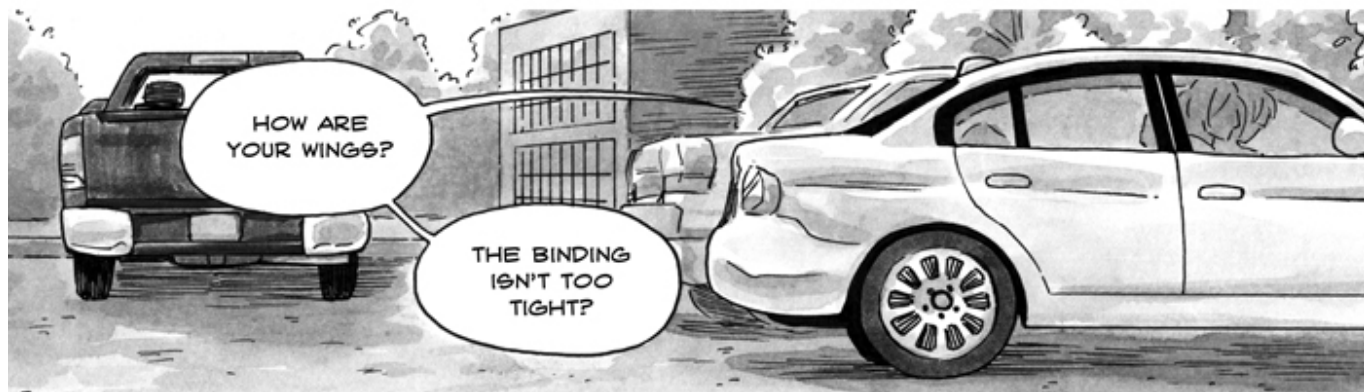

With a few minor changes, the first chapter of Avialae is approved for print! It looks really nice based off the proofs, and I'm so hyped to see the gold foil stamp on the cover.

Webcomics are fun, but I love physical books so much. Designing and putting them together is just so satisfying.

Books should arrive in time for Otakon at the end of July!

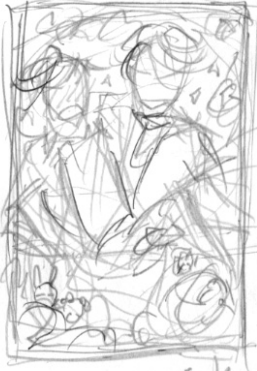

I did a very last minute Gekkan Shoujo Nozaki-kun print before Fanime in May. The doodle to the left is the thumbnail, and I did the entire print in Manga Studio EX 5. I'm moving more and more towards using MS entirely in my digital work. Sorry Photoshop, you don't have enough sparkle effects for me.

Also if you haven't seen Gekkan Shoujo Nozaki-kun, please treat yourself and watch it. It's one of my favorite animes and Nozaki is basically me.

I'M VERY EXCITED ABOUT THIS!! Jack Gross (tumblr: animetrashlord/twitter: @_jackgross) and I have been talking about starting a doujinshi circle together, and this month we are finally doing it! Our circle is called "Lucky Juice" and our first project is a Haikyuu!! Kageyama x Hinata book. I'm writing the story, Jack's doing the pencils, and I'm inking it. We're still hashing out how we work together, but so far it has been great. We don't have an internet presence yet, but that will change in the next month. :D The kagehina doujin should be ready by Otakon, where we will both be tabling!

A note about the sketchbook portion of this:
I did three conventions in a row in May and sent Avialae to print so I had next to zero time for sketching. x__x This might be the case for the next few pdfs, but in exchange you get to see all those sweet comic pages. ;^)
